AFL Cape York House
Foundation Founder

AFL Cape York House Foundation was established to connect with philanthropic & corporate partners in the pursuit of supporting programs coordinated by AFL Cape York Ltd.

AFL Cape York Ltd has established itself as an organisation at the forefront of supporting young people from some of Australia's most remote Indigenous communities across Far North Queensland. The reach of its activities combining land and sea equates to well over 400,000 square kilometres.

Under its four key pillars: Wellbeing, Education, Culture and Career & Pathways, AFL Cape York's programs provide much-needed support for young people from across the region.

AFL Cape York House Foundation is proud to support ongoing opportunities that help guide young people through primary and secondary education, boarding life, employment, and tertiary engagement.

We need your support in continuing the Foundation's agenda, and urge likeminded organisations and individuals to come on the journey with us.

Giving back is giving hope.

AFL Cape York House Foundation was born in 2016, however, our story is decades in the making. Since 2001, AFL Cape York has delivered the Australian Football League's Game Development program throughout remote communities in Far North Queensland. This sustained presence gave insights into the communities and it was clear that geographical remoteness is a key driver of educational disadvantage for young people in these areas, with more than 90% needing to board to complete their education. During visits to communities, it became apparent that the traditional boarding school model also posed challenges for Indigenous young people, often resulting in disengagement from learning.

The AFL partnered with Elders and families to identify the barriers to educate that students faced, and pioneer a blueprint for a purpose-built facility that enabled Indigenous young people to thrive in school and in life. In 2013, AFL Cape York House for Boys opened in Cairns and from its success AFL Cape York House for Girls followed in 2019. Today, AFL Cape York House is the preferred boarding model for Indigenous young people from regions in the Far North, including Cape York Peninsula, Torres Strait Islands and Gulf of Carpentaria.

AFL Cape York House Foundation is the charitable arm of AFL Cape York House. The Foundation was established to provide a meaningful way for the philanthropic community to support programs that deliver genuine outcomes for Indigenous Australians.

OUR Mission

AFL Cape York House Foundation supports AFLCY House boarding programs which aim to create opportunities for young people by improving social & emotional wellbeing, educational and employment outcomes. Being emotionally and physically healthy will enable our First Nations young people to have a positive education and boarding experience.

OUR Values

Respect: We are committed to compassionate leadership, ethical decision making, and nurturing positive relationships. We treat others with dignity, kindness, and understanding, even in the face of challenging situations.

Empathy: By listening with compassion and honouring the experiences of others we deepen our connection with our young people, their families and our stakeholders creating a shared vision and future we can all be proud of.

Inclusion: We actively seek to understand, appreciate, and integrate diverse perspectives, experiences, and talents for the betterment of the collective whole.

Empowerment: We support, guide and motivate individuals to realise their full potential as Australia's next generation of leaders and role models knowing their journeys will inspire change in others and the world around them.

Community: We recognise and are committed to our shared responsibility to walk with our young people on their journey. The principle of subsidiarity guides us in partnering with the communities we serve to best support our young people.

OUR Impact

A proven model

AFL Cape York House Foundation is committed to understanding and eliminating the barriers to education Indigenous young people face. Through our work we aim to shine a light on solutions that improve life outcomes for Indigenous Australians.

Education is often credited as the single greatest agent of change known to man. The ripple effect of education is seen in its immeasurable power to transform lives, not only for the individual, but for their families, their communities and society as a whole - across generations. From obstacle to opportunity, from distress to wellbeing, from struggle to prosperity.

“Research shows young people who complete Year 12 experience better life outcomes in general.”

This includes better health, higher rates of employment with less dependence on welfare, greater earning capacity and more career opportunities. Mental, social and emotional wellbeing is also improved. Year 12 graduates have better self-esteem and are more resilient, being better equipped to handle everyday challenges and contribute to their communities. The chances of a young person displaying antisocial behaviours or entering the justice system also dramatically reduce with education.

We have 96 current students residing across both our Boys and Girls Houses, attending any of our 11 partner schools across the public and private sectors.

Over the years we have seen around 500 young people benefit from our boarding program, and proudly, over 90% of our Boys & Girls House Graduates are now employed in industries such as Mining, Electrical, Defence Forces, Childcare and Education.

ACHIEVING EXCELLENCE

Approximately 90% of Indigenous children must leave their communities to complete their education. Education is the key to creating positive longterm outcomes for children from remote communities however homesickness and social and cultural isolation present significant barriers to this. 90% of Cape York residents have completed Year 12. AFL Cape York House's nation-leading Model of Care enables young people to complete their education in a safe, culturally appropriate, 'home away from home' environment.

06

Through a partnership with AFL Cape York House Foundation, your organisation can give Indigenous young people the resources they need to build positive futures and influencing broader social, cultural, economic and environmental outcomes.

1 Preserving culture

The AFL Cape York House Cultural Program helps to preserve and revitalise the rich cultural heritage of Cape York and Torres Strait Island communities. The program brings Elders and young people together for the passing down of customs and practices including traditional arts and crafting, dance and cultural performance and caring for country. This has a profound impact on the wellbeing of young people living away from home and also serves to safeguard invaluable cultural assets for future generations.

2 Protecting the environment

Traditional marine and land conservation knowledge continues to inform the future of Australia's environmental management response. This demand is fuelling a widespread need for Indigenous Rangers throughout government and public and private sector organisations. Indigenous Ranger Programs are proven to have positive long-term health and wellbeing, social, economic and environmental impacts for participants and their communities. Through the AFL Cape York House Marine Ranger Program we are readying the next generation of young people to answer this call and in doing so helping to secure Australia's environmental future.

3 Empowering communities

Research shows that when you educate a young person the benefit ripples out improving all areas of their life. This includes better health, higher rates of employment with less dependence on welfare, greater earning capacity and more career opportunities. Education brings economic stability to families and communities improving social outcomes. The chances of a young person displaying anti-social behaviours or entering the justice system also dramatically reduces. And, it all starts by giving young people equitable access to education, employment and opportunity.

PROGRAM

Areas

Align your partnership with AFL Cape York House Foundation with goals that are meaningful to your organisation, stakeholders and staff. The AFL Cape York House programs are centred around four core pillars:

Wellbeing

Growing strong, resilient young people who can thrive in the face of life's challenges starts with building a solid foundation of wellbeing. We all know that when we feel well, we are happier and can achieve more. AFL Cape York House provides a 'wrap-around' wellbeing support system with programs that improve a young person's mental, social, emotional and physical health, giving them the resources they need to have agency over their lives and futures.

Culture

The AFL Cape York House Cultural program plays a vital role in the improving the social and emotional wellbeing of Indigenous young people by fostering a strong connection to home and family. The program brings Elders and young people together for the passing down of customs and practices including traditional arts and crafting, dance and cultural performance and caring for country. This has a profound impact on the wellbeing of young people and also helps to preserve cultural traditions for future generations.

Education

Life at home in Cape York and the Torres Strait Islands is very different to the boarding and school environments. For many young people, English is a second language. The AFL Cape York House Education team includes teachers, mentors and tutors who, in conjunction with our eight partner schools, support young people to overcome knowledge gaps, adjust to the classroom and thrive in a learning environment.

Careers & Pathways

Our careers program helps young people discover a career that is right for them. Staff work with young people to create a roadmap, or Individual Pathway Plan, that ensures the student's education plan and career goals align. This includes intensive, pre-employment support to improve a young person's work readiness and access to employment or further education opportunities with ongoing support, coaching and mentoring.
